On the formal invitation of Columban Missionaries Ireland Pakistan Council for Social Welfare & Human Rights delegation headed by Mr. Muhammad Ijaz Noori visited Ireland from 26th May 2012 to 4th June 2012. During their visit to Ireland PCSW&HR delegation stayed at St. Columban Missionaries Dalgan Park Ireland. During the visit delegation did various activities as per detail given below.

27th May 2012

PCSWHR's delegation visited the St. Columbian missionaries Dalgan Park on 27th May 2012 and held meeting with Fathers and Sisters in which, Rev. Fr. Donald Hogan Regional Director, Rev. Fr. Patrick Raleigh ssc, Vice Regional Director & Rev. Fr. Colm Murphy etc. PCSW&HR's delegation also stayed at St. Columbian Missionaries Dalgan Park Ireland from 27th May to 3 June 2012. Dalgan Park is located beside the Hill of Tara, the prehistoric religious and political centre of Ireland. Nearby are the ancient religious monuments of Bru na Boinne and the remains of the ancient monasteries of Monasterboice, Mellifont and Bective. Within the grounds are the ruins of a twelfth century Cistercian Church. Set in 500 acres of parkland and woods, which is also a sanctuary for wildlife. Dalgan Park offers an ideal setting for rest and relaxation and an opportunity to get in touch with the basic natural rhythms of life, which may have been lost in the pressures, and demands of much of modern living. There are six kilometers of graveled walks through woods and beside the rivers Boyne and Skane. These offer a peaceful outer context for inner healing of body, mind and spirit. The Fathers & Sisters warmly welcomed the PCSW&HR's delegation at Dalgan Park and comprehensively briefed about the St. Columbian Missionaries, its history, policies, and area of work. During the meeting with Fathers & Sisters of St. Columbian Missionaries Mr. Noori lauded the efforts of St. Columbian missionaries and said that really it is very inspiring for all of us to see that St. Columbians Mission is practically working for the promotion of interfaith & intercultural harmony. During our visit really we learnt lot of about interfaith & intercultural harmony and dialogues which will be surely helpful for us to promote interfaith & intercultural harmony at our organizational level as well as to build the capacity of our entire team in the field of interfaith & intercultural harmony. We will be now in good position to work for interfaith & intercultural harmony, peace & justice, religious & social tolerance etc at grass root level in more effective etiquette.

Mr. Noori also said that really it is nice for us to stay with Columbian Missionaries' Fathers & Sisters and entire team working and staying there at one place under the one roof in a family atmosphere. As activist on peace & justice and equality we have dream for the world with the culture of justice, peace, equality and human dignity. Please let me say that we enjoyed justice, peace, equality, human dignity, socio economic co-existence and real spirit of interfaith understanding and harmony, while visiting and staying at Dalgan Park we are looking forward the same environment at global level that we enjoyed with all of you at Dalgan Park. During the visit to St. Columbian Missionaries Mr. Noori also briefed the Fathers & Sisters about the PCSW&HR, its mission, vision, objectives, completed and ongoing projects as well as PCSW&HR's initiatives for the interreligious & intercultural harmony, peace, justice, equality and human dignity etc. All fathers & sisters appreciated the PCSW&HR efforts for the protection of human rights in Pakistan and assured their full cooperation and support for this purpose. PCSW&HR delegation also presented the organizations shields to, Rev. Fr. Donald Hogan, Rev. Fr. Patrick Raleigh ssc and Rev. Fr. Colm Murphy to acknowledge their services for the interreligious & intercultural harmony, peace, justice, equality, human dignity etc.

During their visit to Ireland PCSW&HR' delegation visited the historical place Knowth. Knowth is the largest of all passage graves situated within the Brú na Boinne complex. The site consists of one large mound (known as Site 1) and 17 smaller satellite tombs. Essentially Knowth (Site 1) is a large mound (about 12 meters (40 ft) high and 67 meters (220 ft) in diameter,^[1] covering roughly a hectare) and contains two passages, placed along an east-west line. It is encircled by 127 kerbstones (three of which are missing and four of which are badly damaged). The large mound has been estimated to date from between 2500 and 2000 BCE.^[1] The passages are independent of each other, and each leads to a burial chamber. The eastern passage leads to a cruciform chamber, not unlike that found at Newgrange. It contains three recesses and basin stones into which the cremated remains of the dead were placed

PCSW&HR's delegation visited the Newgrange. By 1961 Newgrange was in dilapidated condition and, despite the rapidly increasing number of visitors, there was to no right of public access. It was becoming clear to many that this, one of the greatest monuments in Western Europe, could not be left in its then condition, but urgently required restoration and conservation, at least in the entrance area. P.J Hartnett, the archaeological officer with Bord Failte Eireann (Irish Tourist Board) and a former student of Professor O, Kelly's arranged a site meeting at Newgrange with a high-level committee of all those who has a professional interest in the monument

PVSW&HR delegation also visited the Round Tower. The Round Tower was the Irish reaction to the Norse raids on monasteries in the 10th /11th century A.D. these tapering buildings, over 100 feet high, served as watch-towers, belfries, repositories for church valuables and as refuges for the community. The door, normally 15-20 feet above ground, was reached by a movable ladder and the interior was divided into four or more storeys. The present height of the tower is 100 the level of the surroundings has been raised by burials and the conical cap is missing.
